FRANKFORT HIRES POLICE OFFICER

For sometime, it has been necessary for the Village Trustees of Frankfort to exercise their authority as police officers, because of many reckless drivers. At times this has been rather unpleasant and therefore the Village Board decided it best to employ one person as local police, to police their streets and what ever may come under that title.

At the last Village Board meeting of April 6th Mr. Fred Weislerberger was sworn in as Special Police. The Board instructed him to use good judgement and common sense, and whatever he would do in that capacity he would be backed by the Board.

The speed limit on Frankfort's main street is 20 miles and on the other streets 25 miles per hour. In the last week or so Police Chief Weislerberger has made three arrests where autoists very greatly exceeded the speed limits. They were brought before Police Magistrate J. C. Knight and fined.

'Make 'Em Last'—That's Number One Rule For Nation's 32 Million Automobile Drivers

Cheated out of thousands of miles of service, these tires failed and were rejected at inspection station because of:

1. Bad wheel bearings, loose king pin bolts and badly worn tie-rod ends.
2. Loose front end.
3. Bad camber condition.
4. Boot substituting for tread and fabric.
5. Toe-in and low pressure.

"Never mind us. Take care of the tires first!"

That was the command gasped out to two stretcher bearers when (in a cartoonist's imagination) they attempted to give first aid to the injured occupants of a badly wrecked automobile.

The cartoon, published in a nationally-read magazine, may exaggerate the situation, but it demonstrates beyond all doubt that 1942 will go down in history as the year when rubber became more precious than rubies.

Talk of "rubber stockpiles," "crude rubber" and "carry-over tonnage" leaves the average motorist cold. He doesn't understand all the technicalities behind the current rubber shortage. But he does know that when his present tires wear out, he will be forced to leave his six-cylinder, 1937 Blue Streak standing idle in his garage.

The National Safety Council, Chicago, lists many DON'Ts the motor-

Drive only when absolutely necessary, and then drive at a moderate speed.

Start and stop slowly, slow down on turns, and park carefully to keep from grinding off the tread and nicking the rubber off your tires.

Use brakes carefully (shift into second going downhill), and make sure that your brakes are adjusted so that your tires will not be worn unevenly.

Every 5,000 miles or so cross-switch your tires to increase total mileage. If your wheels are correctly aligned and balanced, the cross-switching will add miles and miles to each tire's life.

Check the air pressure of all your tires each week. Have the tires and tubes inspected regularly against future trouble and wasted rubber.

Such suggestions will go far in helping you keep your tires as long

6. Misalignment.
7. Loose and badly worn tie-rod ends, king pin bolts, drag links and bushings.
8. Camber error and loose front end.
9. Excessive side drag.

Periodic inspection, proper care and adjustment would have increased the service of any of these tires by thousands and thousands of miles. The driver who neglects his tires today will soon become a pedestrian.

and oil consumption of your car.

During the past years a nervous condition hit the majority of the drivers in the U.S.A. This was noticeable in their attempt to get between two points in the shortest time possible. They sped from one place to another without fully realizing that a moderate speed will get them to their destination, most of the time, in as short a time as if they roared on down the road.

Today, when gasoline and oil are necessary to help win this war, moderate speeding not only saves you money because of a smaller consumption of gas and oil, but also helps your nation.

The accompanying charts, dealing with tire, gas and oil conservation, give you more definite proof of the value of moderate driving than would thousands of words.

At a 65-mile per hour top cruising speed, as compared with 40 m.p.h., gas consumption was more than 30 per cent highist must continually keep in mind, besides a few important DO's. If he keeps on forgetting about them he is soon without rubber on his tires.

Checkup by Experienced Operators.

It is possible that more motorists are going to maintenance stations to have their tires checked than ever before. (This incidentally, is one of the essential DO's.)

Motorists there will learn that their tires are unsafe (alas!) if the fabric, breaker strip, or outer body ply is exposed. Also that if the tire has cuts or snags greater than an inch in any direction and deep enough to expose body fabric, it is then in the unsafe condition. Furthermore, if the tire has a bulge it is dangerous to use, for patches or boots are not sufficient protection. Then, too, another way to learn if the tires are unsafe is either to look over the wheel and tire yourself, or have the garage attendant see if bolts, nut or lug are bent, cracked, or if the rim or wheel flange is defective.

Then after you have made sure that your tires and wheels are OK, your next best procedure is to get yourself in the habit of using war time driving rules to conserve your tires as long as possible.

Here is a list of rules, compiled by the safety council. You, of course, can add to them.

as possible. But the time will soon come when you will be thinking about having your tires recapped or retreaded.

If you are one of those fortunate persons whose application was approved by your local tire rationing board, then a few suggestions may prove valuable. Recapping, which is vulcanizing a tread surface onto a partially remaining tread, and re-treading, which means stripping old tread off the tire and replacing it with a new tread and vulcanizing onto the casing, is done with the greatest of economy and safety when the following rules are remembered:

Use only tire cases which have no cracks, punctures or flaws.

Recap tires that are not worn through to the cords of the casing.

Don't allow anyone to recap or retread your tires unless he can meet a high standard of workmanship.

When you decide on a certain shop to retread or recap your tires be sure that their services are reliable, their material the best available, and the workmanship as good as, or better than, any other shop.

Checking on Gas and Oil.

Once you have begun to follow these rules and suggestions for your tire protection and safety you should center your attention on the gasoline er. Yet the average gain in speed was only 15 miles an hour, as the faster driver had to slow down more frequently, and with greater abruptness.

Oil consumption increases at an even greater rate than gasoline consumption when the speed was stepped up to more than 35 miles per hour. Almost four times as much oil is used at 65 m.p.h. than at a 40-mile top cruising speed. The difference is even greater when a car is equipped with an oil filter.

If you want to be a safe driver and also conserve gas, oil, tires, besides lives of other motorists and pedestrians, remember these few rules for driving today:

Start early on each trip so you can get to your destination without using excessive speed.

Drive at a moderate speed suited to the conditions of the highway on which you are traveling. Don't pass any more cars than the number you observe passing you.

Speed up gradually, but shift from one gear to another as quickly as possible. Slow down gradually.

Warm up the motor before driving . . . reduce speeds on grades . . . against headwinds . . . and keep your car tuned up for greatest economy.

Be smart by being thrifty with gas, oil, and automotive material.

Recaps, Retreads Keep Vital Transportation Moving

When your present tires begin to show the dreaded wear, you'll be giving more thought than now to the possibilities of having them retreaded or recapped:

If you come under the following "List B" classification you can get the work done. This list includes:

1. Applicants to whom other transportation service is not available: Licensed taxi, for transport to places where construction or mechanical structural, or highway maintenance services are needed.

- 2. Transportation of executives, engineers, technicians and workers to and from work essential to the war effort.
- 3. Transportation of produce and supplies to and from the farm if applicant does not have a truck or other means of transportation. In other words, applicant owning automobile may get retreads.
- 4. Transportation of federal, state and local government employees on functions essential to public health, safety or war effort.
- 5. Transportation of mail by private person under government contract—rural letter carriers.
- 6. Wholesale delivery of newspapers, provided automobile is used for NO OTHER PURPOSE.
- 7. Hearse, milk trucks are also included in the listing.

Plutocrat Hater, Hitler, Is Noticed As Being One

Nazi Chief Draws Greatest Private Income of Any Man in World.

LONDON.—Adolf Hitler, violent critic of the "plutocrats," draws the greatest private income in the world, according to the London Times.

Hitler is sole owner of Zentral Verlag, the great German publishing combine which has an annual turnover of about $200,000,000, employs more than 100,000 workers and shows a net profit of between $28,000,000 and $40,000,000.

No balance sheets are ever published; no auditor is ever allowed to examine the books. By terms of a contract arranged between Hitler and the director of the whole structure, Hitler has complete and absolute control over the company's income.

What he does with the money is a mystery, the Times declares. "It comes to him, not as the fuhrer, but as the head of a private concern. It is said in Germany that the Berchtesgaden house and estate are kept up out of this income, but even the whole paraphernalia of electric lifts and brightly lit tunnels cannot account for more than a small fraction of the great sum."

Started Control in 1921.

The Times reports that Hitler's control began in 1921 when the Zentral Verlag der NSDAP (National Socialist party) was registered as a company in the name of Hitler.

"At first its development was slow, but after Hitler took power, it grew quickly by the simple process of confiscating almost all competitors. In 1939 it took over the Jewish concerns of Mosse and Ullstein, two of the largest publishing houses."

"About the same time, it took over, again by confiscation, the famous Wulf News agency. Now known as the German News agency, this service has a complete monopoly in the German news field."

Owens Advertising Agencies.

"Zentral Verlag owns practically all of the advertising agencies. All the party books and periodicals also have to be published through Zentral Verlag—which means that it gets all the profits, not merely from compulsory sales of 'Mein Kampf,' but from the innumerable and lengthy books by Rosenberg, Goebbels and other Nazi leaders."

"In addition, almost all technical and professional periodicals in Germany are printed through the same channel—Hitler's Zentral Verlag."

"Its greatest business is in the publication of newspapers. It now owns two-thirds of all German newspapers outright in addition to drawing advertising revenue from 11 of the others."

'Help,' Written in Sand, Saves 2 Wrecked Crews

MELBOURNE.—Lieut. T. H. Moorer, an American naval aviator, was credited today with the rescue of two crews, that of his own seaplane and another from a ship, because he directed the writing of an appeal for help in the sand of a northern Australian beach.

Moorer and his men were shot down during a fight with nine Japanese planes. He set his flaming craft down on the water near a surface vessel he had been circling in an effort to identify it. The ship picked up the seaplane's crew, but a little later was set afire itself by the Japanese. Eventually the ship and plane crews succeeded in beaching the vessel.

Two days passed while the shipwrecked men searched vainly for food. Moorer supervised the writing of a huge message on the flat beach, which was soon spotted by an Australian plane. It circled, disappeared, and then came back to drop supplies.

The crews of both craft were finally picked up by an Australian navy ship which brought them to safety.

Girl Who Lost Leg Gets Her Bike, Rides It, Too

CHANUTE, KANSAS.—Delores Brandt's parents promised her a bicycle for Christmas a couple of years ago.

Soon after a bone tumor necessitated amputation of her right leg at the hip. The 12-year-old girl got a wheel chair instead.

But Delores had other ideas. She used the wheel chair three days. Then she gritted her teeth and switched to crutches.

By July of the following year she was walking expertly with an artificial limb—and demanding that bike. Last Christmas, a year later, she received it.

Today, a courageous, triumphant girl of 12, she rides.

Judge Recalls a Thief Who Stole His Shoes

NEW YORK.—Magistrate Ambrose Haddock doesn't forget a face.

When a prisoner appeared before him on a voluntary charge of vagrancy, Magistrate Haddock studied his face and turned his mind back to childhood days.

"I sentence you to 30 days, 'Jigger' and you're lucky I don't give you an additional sentence for stealing my shoes 34 years ago."

War Production Delayed By Desire for Perfection . . . Rubber Tire Substitute Possibilities . . .

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—The desire to make everything perfect—not to start until the last bug has been eliminated and every tool and every worker is just right—is causing more delay in our mounting war production than labor troubles, disinclination of capital to take risks, propaganda, and any four or five other factors you may choose to add.

That is the considered opinion of some very high officials in our war effort. The hardest thing in the world, apparently, is to get manufacturers to realize that a plane or tank or a gun is sometimes useful even if it does not keep up with the Joneses.

The army and navy naturally are the worse sufferers from this. They always have been, in every emergency. It is partly their own fault.

In fairness this criticism does not now apply to the big producers who are turning out planes, tanks, guns and ammunition with a speed and efficiency which has delighted the government. But it does apply with considerable emphasis to those manufacturers who have been persuaded by the government to switch from peace time to war production.

It should be stated that this criticism also should exempt the automobile industry, which has changed over with a speed that has surprised everyone, including the motor people.

Machine Tool Jam

However, it applies to far too many, and the government is trying various schemes to correct it. One of these is interesting because this desire for perfection has run into a machine tool bottleneck.

Everyone knows that there is a crying need for every possible machine tool. Who shall get them has to be decided for a long time now by the government. The manufacturer needing them most, from a war production standpoint, gets a priority order—or is supposed to get one.

So Manufacturer A is asked to change over from his normal product and take up the manufacture of machine guns. Immediately he begins his plans, and pretty soon he notifies the proper authorities in Washington that he will require say 200 machine tools of varying descriptions.

Now the truth probably is that he could manufacture those machine guns with 75 new machine tools, using a larger number of machine tools already on hand for the other processes. He doesn't think so.

But enough tools for all of his kind are not available, and will not be available, for the simple reason that if we had ten times as many as we have we would merely enlarge our demands. We want all we can get, of almost everything in the war supply line.

So the government is appointing committees of experts, in each locality, to visit such plants and try to mark down the requirements of these manufacturers about to change over.

Holland's Invasion Pointed To Coming Rubber Shortage

The responsibility for failure to do something about synthetic rubber production, when it was urged on the government by the oil companies, lies pretty high up in the administration.

All of which means that certain highly placed officials, including the President of the United States, are desperately anxious to find a substitute for rubber used in making tires, so as to avoid their being blamed by the public for the inconvenience and worse that will be caused to the American way of living by the "mistake" of not having developed synthetic rubber shortly after the war assumed world proportions.

The plain truth, as historians will see it, is that this government ought to have realized the day Holland was overrun by the Nazis that our rubber supply from the Far East was in jeopardy.

We had no way of knowing that Japan was as strong as she was, but historians will not be lenient in appraising the judgment of officials who were so badly informed.

This is what is clearly realized NOW in Washington. Hence there are various moves under way to prevent the shortage of rubber becoming so important here that it may become a major incident, to be noted by the historians.

If some way can be found to keep most automobiles rolling in this country, historians are not going to criticize the lack of new cars, or even a shortage of gasoline.

This being the situation, or rather the view of the situation taken by those whom the historians would be inclined to blame, the whole problem is now up to the resourcefulness of American inventors.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.

● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To save Norland Airways from bankruptcy, Cruger has agreed to have his partner, Alan Slade, fly a so-called scientist named Frayne to the Anawotto in search of the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. Slade's application for overseas service with the army air corps has been rejected, but he is less disappointed when he learns that the company can stay in business, thanks to their client, who has paid enough to enable Cruger to buy a new plane, a Lockheed. And he is pleased when Cruger tells him that Lynn Morlock, daughter of the "flying Padre" is not going abroad with her Red Cross unit. Slade meets Lynn in town and goes with her to help a man who has been wounded in a fight. The wounded man turns out to be Slim Tumstead, a flyer who has lost his license for drinking and who is little better than an outlaw.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER III

Slade pressed closer as the yellow-faced man, wiping his hands on his apron, hurried out.

The pock-marked man righted the table and chairs as Lynn busied herself loading a hypodermic.

"How is he?" asked Slade.

"He's all right," was the cool-noted response. "But there's a three-inch skull cut we'll have to close up. How did you get it?"

Slim's lips twitched. But he remained silent.

"How about a drink first?" he suggested, as Lynn turned back to him.

"You've had enough already," she said, quietly impersonal.

"Who gave you that jab?" persisted Slade. The look of the room clearly proclaimed that the fight had been a regal one.

Slim still declined to speak. It was the pock-marked man in the doorway who broke the silence.

"He got it from Wolf Winston," croaked the indignant landlord. "And it's another free-for-all chalked up against this place o' mine."

"Quiet, please," was Lynn's cool-noted admonition.

Wolf Winston, Slade remembered, was a whisky-runner who'd repeatedly proved his adroitness at evading the outstretched arm of the law. He also recalled that Slim, once the crack flyer for Colonial, had been twice grounded for drinking on duty. Still later he had been linked up with Edmonton Scotty's activities as a high-grader. And there'd been a rumor or two that of late he'd been running contraband liquor in from the coast ports.

Slade felt sorry for Tumstead, just as he would feel sorry for any man of promise who threw away his chances. Among flyers, he knew, there was a free-masonry that made you forget a confrere's passing faults. But for a year now Slim had seemed stubbornly headed for trouble.

"This is going to hurt a little," Lynn was saying as she sterilized a bullet-probe, "but we've got to make sure there's no glass in that cut before we close it up."

"A drink would help a little," Slim once more suggested.

"You can have a cigarette," she conceded, "when I put the stitches in."

Slade produced the cigarette and held out his lighter.

Slim looked up at him with an eye that was still indifferently derisive.

"So the big boys took it away from you," he observed.

"Took what away?" asked Slade, resenting the note of mockery.

"That little tin-horn outfit of yours. I hear you're folding up."

"Not on your life," countered Slade. "We've got a new ship and we're going stronger than ever."

The indifference went out of Tumstead's eye.

"So you've got a new ship. That's certainly worth remembering."

"Why?" challenged Slade.

Tumstead shrugged.

"Oh, I kind of thought the big fight had brought a famine in ships over here. Does that mean you're going to keep on flying the ice routes?"

"I am," proclaimed Slade.

"You'll change your tune," Slim said, "when you get the same dirty deal I got from Colonial."

Slade backed away a little. He had the natural pride of the flyer in flying. And the thought that one of the best in the service could swing so far off-center gave him a sinking feeling.

"I thought it was the other way round," he observed.

Slim's eye-flash of hostility did not escape the younger pilot.

"Oh, I go my own way," the man on the couch announced with a laugh that was not without bitterness. But a note of desolation in the voice brought a surge of pity through Slade.

It was Lynn who spoke next.

"You ought to have a week of rest," she observed as she encircled her patient's head with a white gauze bandage that gave him the air of wearing a crown, slightly tilted.

"Rest?" echoed Tumstead. His laugh was thin yet scornful. "I can't afford to rest, lady. I've got things to do."

Lynn glanced about at the blood-stained furniture.

"You've lost a good deal of blood, remember. And you'll need a new dressing in a day or two. What you'd better do is see Sister Nadeau over at St. Gabriel's."

"You've had enough already," she said, quietly impersonal.

"When?" asked the man with the bandaged head.

"Tomorrow or next day," said Lynn as she closed her bag and stood up.

"I won't be—"

But Tumstead, for some reason, left that sentence unfinished. He shrugged and glanced at Slade. Then his half-mocking gaze went back to Lynn.

"I'd rather have you do my dressing tomorrow," he said as he reached for her hand. Slade was nettled at the open insolence in that gesture.

"Hasn't she done enough for you?" he demanded.

Tumstead lifted a languid eye to his fellow-flyer.

"Is she letting you make her decisions?" he inquired. The derisive note in that inquiry brought Slade's gaze about to the girl's face. But in that face he found nothing to help him frame an answer.

"Let's go," Lynn said with her first sign of impatience.

Tumstead, stretched out full-length on his couch, looked after them as they moved toward the door.

"Since you're going," he said, still casually insolent, "which way are you heading? I mean you, Slade."

The younger flyer swung about and studied the blanched face under its swathing bandages.

"I'm flying into the Anawotto country tomorrow," he announced.

Tumstead's lips made a whistling sound.

"So they hooked you for that fight?"

Slade, looking down, could see the older pilot smiling up at the ceiling.

"What do you know about it?" he demanded.

Tumstead continued to blink up at the ceiling.

"Not a thing, son, not a thing," he answered with a listless sort of indifference. His movement as he turned to the wall was plainly one of dismissal.

Slade felt happier when he found himself in the open sunlight, the balsam-scented open sunlight of spring, with Lynn walking along at his side. She was close beside him, yet he nursed an impression of her remoteness. And that impression took on an edging of pain as some inner voice told him she was the one thing in all the wide world he wanted.

"So you're not going overseas?" he ventured as he noticed how the sunlight gave glints of gold to her mahogany-brown hair.

"No, I'm going to meet Father at St. Gabriel's," she answered casually, having discerned a light in his eyes which she found a little disturbing.

She was, he knew, evading the real issue.

"And after that?" he prompted.

"I'm flying north with Father in the morning," she announced. She found the courage, as she said it, to meet his gaze.

"What made you change your mind?" asked Slade, puzzled by her loyalty to a life that was giving her so little of what other women clamored for.

"Father isn't young any more. He can't keep on forever. I was hoping he'd give up a sort of work that's too hard for him."

"And too hard for you," proclaimed Slade. He was remembering, at the moment, how she and the Flying Padre had been grounded by a blizzard, the winter before, and had kept life in their bodies by dining on their own mukluks of untanned sealskin, well boiled.

That, Slade told himself, was no life for a girl. She was of too fine a fiber for such frontier roughness. It impressed him as too much like trying to grow a flower in a stamping mill.

"Did your father ask you to stay on?" Slade questioned.

"He'd never do that," was her prompt reply. "He's too big and fine to let his own interests come first."

"Of course," said Slade, wondering if there was a hidden reproach in that reply.

"But I was hoping," Lynn continued, "that Father would give up flying and settle down."

Slade's smile was brier and slightly bitter.

"That," he affirmed, "is something not easy to get out of your system."

"You'll have to, some day," she reminded him.

He seemed to catch a faint glimmer of hope from that.

"There's only one thing," he said, "could ever turn me into a chair-warmer."

"What?" she asked.

"You," he answered with unexpected grimness.

She did not look up at him. But she quickened her stride a little.

"I thought we weren't going into that again."

He knew it was useless to argue the point. But that newer look of firmness in her face brought an answering firmness to his own slightly rebellious lips. For at the back of his mind lurked a suspicion that more and more refused to stay down.

"Were you going to the front because Barrett Walden was there?" he asked. It was his effort to keep all trace of bitterness out of his voice, apparently, that brought a small and womanly smile to Lynn's lips.

"Barrett Walden's not at the front," she said. "He's in an instruction camp at Aldershot."

"But he wanted you to go overseas?" pursued her none too happy companion.

"Barrett's been a very good friend to Father. He's never forgotten that Dad saved his life, and—"

"And you were his nurse at Fort St. John for four weeks," cut in the unhappy Slade.

"Father," Lynn was saying, "is very fond of Barrett. And Barrett feels the same way about the Padre." She walked on in silence for a moment. "He's been trying to get him a berth in the Department of Mines at Ottawa."

"Where he'd mope like a caged eagle," was Slade's slightly embittered comment.

"He's not the moping kind," protested the girl.

Slade made no comment on that. He remembered the flash of fire from those same eyes when he had once spoken of the Flying Padre's occupation as quixotic.

"A flyer never wants to give up," he observed.

Lynn came to a stop. The face she turned to her companion was a clouded one.

"That's what frightens me, Alan," she quietly acknowledged. "They don't always stop in time."

"The Padre knows the ropes all right," Slade protested.

"But something happened last month," the girl was saying, "when we were flying in to Coronation. It was good weather and everything was going nicely, with Father at the controls. Then I saw that something was wrong. I had to jump in and straighten out the ship. Father, all of a sudden, didn't know where he was. Everything went blank, for a moment or two. He said, later, it was like a switch turned off and then turned on again. But things like that mustn't happen to a flyer."

Slade shrugged and smiled, mercifully intent on easing the concern out of her eyes.

"There's many a bush flyer gets over-tired," he casually affirmed.

"That's what Father said. He claimed he'd been careless about his eating and had been going too hard. But when I saw him with those empty eyes and that cold sweat on his face, I knew it went deeper than he pretended."

Slade forced a laugh.

"He's clipped many a cloud since then. And he'll keep going until they ground him for old age."

The clouded hazel eyes searched his face.

"But can't you see, Alan, what I'm fighting for? Can't you understand how we all want security? How, when we love someone, we have to think of his future?"

Slade looked down into the hazel eyes. Their loveliness sent a wave of recklessness through him.

"It's your future I'd rather think of," he asserted.

But the girl with the clouded eyes didn't seem to hear him.

"I'm all Father has now."

THE DAY OF ACCLAM

LESSON TEXT—Mark 11:1-11; Luke 19:41-44.

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.—Mark 11:9.

The last week of our Lord's earthly life had come. "Normally, in fact almost universally, the last week of a man's life is of practically no significance. In many cases he is too sick to speak with any clear intelligence, and, of course, when ill, is incapable of doing any noteworthy deeds. In our Lord's life, the last week was the most important of all, and to it more space is given (in Scripture) than to any one whole year of Jesus' ministry" (Dr. Wilbur M. Smith).

The first day of that week found our Lord riding into Jerusalem in humility, and yet in royal majesty, to present Himself as Israel's King and Messiah. We find

I. The King Seeking Man's Help (Mark 11:1-7).

How surprising that the One who made and upholds all things (Col. 1:16, 17) should have to say, "The Lord hath need of him," in sending for a humble beast of burden. Yet therein lies a marvelous truth. He has graciously so ordered the universe that He has need of us and of our possessions. That was true in the days of His flesh, when He had voluntarily become poor for our sakes. In a somewhat different sense, but nonetheless precious, it is true today.

To be needed by anyone—to have that which can be used—is always encouraging, but to find that the Master needs us and what we have to give, is truly inspiring. Let us learn to give as readily as the owner of the colt (vv. 5, 6), and let us also learn the important lesson of unquestioning obedience taught in verse 4. "They went their way" to do what the Lord told them to do. How greatly simplified and glorified would be the lives of Christian people if they would thus obey Christ.

II. The King Receiving Man's Homage (Mark 11:8-11).

Presenting Himself as their Messiah, Jesus received the enthusiastic acclaim of His disciples and friends, who were probably joined by others who were drawn by the excitement. But the Pharisees did not join in (see Luke 19:39, 40) nor did the city, not even knowing who He was (Matt. 21:10, 11). So it is today; some love and praise Him, some hate Him, others just ignore Him. Of which class are you?

He gave Jerusalem and the nation a final opportunity to receive Him. It was not yet too late, but it was their last chance. Such a time comes in the life of everyone of us. They rejected Him. What do we do?

But let us not forget that there were those who shouted, "Hosanna," who cast their garments down before Him and waved palms of victory and joy. Thank God for their holy enthusiasm. Pray God that we may have a little more of it. We have come to the place where nobody shouts "Hosanna" or "Hallelujah" except the church choir—and they do it only in carefully modulated tones. We cheer at ball games or at a political rally, and while we surely do not want that same kind of confusion in the church, it would be quite appropriate to bring some real enthusiasm into our Christianity.

Our Lord knew that it would not be long ere the multitude would be changing their cry to "Crucify Him," for He knew their sinful hearts. So in the midst of His day of acclamation we see

III. The King Weeping Over Man's Sin (Luke 19:41-44).

In times of great joy or under unusual circumstances we are prone to think only of our own pleasure or our own need. But with Christ the need of the souls of men was never for a moment forgotten. He might well have gone on to Bethany to rest and rejoice with His friends over His triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

This constant and tenderhearted concern which Christ had for the city which hated and was soon to crucify Him; this remembrance of their need even in His brief hour of public acclaim, may well teach the church a much needed lesson. Many churches are prosperous, well cared for, and even popular. They are prone to rest back and ride the crest of the wave of popularity, forgetting the souls of men and women in need, many of whom live under the very shadow of the church. Shame on us for such callous indifference in the light of our Lord's agonized weeping—for such is the meaning of the word in Luke 19:41.

Others may observe that their city or community is hostile to the gospel, that men would rather crucify the Christ than receive Him. And so they are content to have their snug little spiritual retreat where they meet to comfort one another and to congratulate themselves on their spiritual haven. Again we say, shame on us!

TINLEY PARK GARDEN CLUB

April! The first month of Spring when mother earth is awakening from her long winter sleep.

April! The very sound, as we repeat the word brings to our memory ears the patter patter of the showers which are fore runners of May flowers. With Spring, comes the hour of earth's release, who with her banners proudly unfurled, awakens us as an army singing, and we see green leaves, green grass, the budding trees and battalions of lovely crocuses and lillies. We should take heed of the meaning of Springs' awakening and in our hearts uproot the evil weeds of malice, unkindness and injustice and cultivate the beautiful flowers of kindness, truthfulness and fairness. In doing this we are following the golden rule of doing unto others as you would they should do unto you.

The regular meeting of the Tinley Park Garden Club was in the home of Mrs. John Werth April 16 with a large attendance.

Chicago Flower Show will be at Thornhill Farm, May 14, 15, 16 and 17, 1942.

Citizens Service Committee

Dear Friends:

I have received letters from my mother, Mrs. W. M. Cross telling me of your organization. She also has sent clippings from the Times of the list of fellows in the service from Tinley. A few days ago I received a package from you. I must say I was greatly surprised and pleased with the contents. I thank you ever so much for the gift.

I think its a fine organization and that it is appreciated by the men in the armed forces from Tinley Park. Again thank you.

Sincerely,

J. M. Wilson, Lexington Air Group U.S.S. Lexington, c-o Postmaster, San Francisco, Cal.

Gunner, thanks for the letter. The community has been waiting to hear from you and we appreciate it very much. It's too bad the censor is so strict as we would have liked to hear about some of your experiences around Pearl Harbor. The Community is ready to serve you boys particularly those in the battle zone. Don't be shy, in asking us for favors we are organized for that purpose. What kind of razor blades do you use, can you use a bundle for blue jackets which consists of sweaters, gloves, helmet etc. C. A. Wallin, Citizens Service Committee.

April 15, 1942

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to let you know my new change of address. My address now is Pvt. John A. Lehman, 3604512 A.P.O. 32, 2810-0 Co. F, c/o Postmaster, San Francisco, Cal. I also received your mirror and comb and it fits perfectly with the kit you sent. Thanks a lot. As ever, Johnnie.

I sincerely thank you for wanting to send gifts and things, but my necessities are small and may be obtained here at a much smaller cost than if I were to request them from you. Nevertheless I shall small bulletin board to your kitchen wall, and pin up all instruction sheets on it.

2. Cleaning. Electric motors wear better if they are kept clean. Wipe dust and grit off the exposed parts of your appliance motors with a soft, dry cloth.

3. Keeping dry. Never allow irons, toasters, space heaters, waffle irons, or other appliances with heating elements to get wet. They may be damaged by water. Clean with dry cloth.

4. Lubrication. Electric motors should be lu-bricated every six months. Use six drops of light oil in each oil hole (less for small appliance motors). If motor has grease cups, use light grease, or vaseline thinned with light oil.

5. Never put off a repair! If you think an appliance may need adjustment or repair, call a service man at once. A skilful twist of his wrench may prevent a costly overhauling later.

5 ways
to make your electric appliances last longer

Now that all of us are trying to get the most out of the things we own, it is wise to remember that the electric aids in our homes were built to last. If we don't mistreat them, if we give them a reasonable amount of care, they will respond by continuing to perform their time-saving tasks through the uncertain period ahead.

Here are five simple ways to make electric appliances last longer. Tear this out of your paper—let the whole family study it—save it for reference. Faithfully carry out these five suggestions in your home, and be confident that you are adding months and years to the lives of your electric servants.

ORLAND PARK

IN MEMORIAM

ENDERS, MARY—In fond and loving memory of our dear mother who passed away three years ago, May 3rd, 1939.
Our broken hearts have memories, And dreams when day is done. Of how when life is finished here, We'll be with you, Mother dear.
LOVING CHILDREN AND GRAND-CHILDREN.

The card and bunco party given for the benefit of the McCord school on Friday evening, April 24 was a great success. There were 17 tables of bunco and six of cards and 116 people attended the affair. Mrs. William Braasch at whose home and through whose efforts the party was given, wishes to thank all those who donated prizes or who assisted in anyway, for their splendid co-operation in making the party such a success.

Chris Yunker is proudly displaying a pretty little card which announces that he is a grandfather again. The new granddaughter, who arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Yunker of Brookfield on April 17, weighed 7 lbs. and has been named Sharon Ann.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Keuch of Blue Island celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary last Sunday. Mr. Chris Yunker, brother of Mrs. Keuch, attended the anniversary dinner.

The total number of men between the ages of 45 and 64 registered in Cook County District No. 10 on April 27 was 3,759. At the Orland Park High school there were 252 registered from Orland Park. Miss Evelyn Priest served as Chief Registrar and was assisted by the following volunteers: John O. Harlan, Olin Ellwood, John Betts, Wm. Larkin Sherman S. Knox and Mesdames Geo. Cox, Geo. Gee, Jr., Edward Gee, Chas. Maddor, John Betts, Howard Creer and Miss Ruth Hull.

Shirley Braasch took part in the Dance Review given at the Lemont High School last Friday evening, under the auspices of the Lemont P. T. A. Music was furnished by the Lemont High school and Grade school bands and the proceeds went to the P. T. A. School Milk Fund.

Don't fail to reserve the night of May 2 for the card and bunco party which will be given in the school gym under the auspices of the P. T. A. The purpose of this affair is to raise funds to complete payment on the record player and amplifier, recently presented to the school by the P. T. A. There will be refreshments and dancing following the games.

About 50 attended the Red Cross First Aid class in the Orland Park Gym last Monday. Fractures, sprains and dislocations were discussed and the class was given an opportunity to apply special emergency splints for these conditions. The third set of questions were passed out, to be answered and returned at next Monday's meeting when the subject of sunstroke, heat prostration, frost have been residing on the Paddock farm the past month, will move to Joliet the first of the month so they will be nearer Mr. Rimke's work.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlow Jungles entertained at dinner Saturday evening, April 18 in honor of the 13th wedding anniversary of their sister and brother in law, Mr. and Mrs. Mac McCumber of Joliet. In the evening, relatives and friends gathered at the Jungles home and surprised them. Cards were the diversion of the evening. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Ed Klott, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bump, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bump and son Wayne of Joliet, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Tomastic and daughter Janice of Joliet, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ott and daughter Helen of Delwood Highlands. Lawrence Bokoski and Joe Gudac the honored guests and their daughters Norma and Betty.

Miss Irma Jungles who was detained from attending the Lockport High school by illness was able to return Wednesday.

Saturday morning, the Girls 4-H club met in the church dining room and spent several hours studying patterns and cutting out their garments which they plan to make. Two new members were added to the list: Mary Jane Visconti and Margaret Markiewicz. A song fest and short business, completed the meeting. Next Saturday morning the girls will continue their work.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Carroll and children of Chicago were weekend guests at the Frank Carroll home. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steltzer and daughter of Argo spent a few days the past week at the home of their parents Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller.

Pupils attending the Lockport High School enjoyed a vacation Monday due to registration of men from 45 to 65 and Tuesday due to the Sugar rationing.

On Friday afternoon a group of ladies interested in seeing a Home Bureau unit organized in Homer met in the home of Mrs. Frank Loucks. Mrs. Edith Huffman, home advisor, was present as was also Mrs. McDonald. Mrs. Huffman gave one of the major lessons. Another meeting has been scheduled for the afternoon of May 15 at the home of Mrs. Loucks and anyone at all interested is asked to be present.

May 3, Sunday school will convene at 10 o'clock in the Congregational Church with Owen Rowley, superintendent in charge. At 11 o'clock the Rev. Harold Finley of Chicago will conduct worship services. Miss Jean Rowley is in charge of the special music.

The Maple Street Arbor of Gleaners will sponsor a dance in the Frankfort school gym May 1.

Mrs. Robert Corp and son Donald Gene returned home Wednesday from St. Josephs hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Bentley of Lockport have been spending a few days in the Corp home.

Mrs. Madge Storm has returned from a visit at the home of her sister Mrs. John Cutler in Plainwell, Michigan.

Fourteen members of the Young Peoples Fellowship attended the conference of the Aurora Association at Sandwich, Ill. Sunday afternoon and evening. Those attending from Homer were the Misses Betty Hartman, Lois Jungles, Eleanor Kopelman, Isabel Anderson, Shirley Burch, Jean Rowley, Betty Rowley, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Carlson, Owen Rowley, David Bigelow, Rev. Harold Finley, Donald Dunn and Leonard Bertelson.

Next Sunday afternoon and evening the State Pilgrim Fellowship will hold their annual association meeting at Evanston. A group from this church are planning to attend.

Mrs. Ira Anderson, Mrs. Fred Paddock and Mrs. Angelo Depra attended a special committee of Woman's Fellowship in the Aurora Association meeting and luncheon in the home of Mrs. C. E. Wolsted Tuesday.

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Welter entertained at dinner in honor of their two daughters, Mrs. Bruce Anderson and Mrs. Robt. Zeisemer who are celebrating their birthdays this week. Other members of the family present were Miss Margaret Welter, Alvin and Gloria. Owen Storm of Maple Road was also a dinner guest. The honored ones received several pretty gifts.

John Cutler spent the weekend with his parents in Michigan. His mother has been quite seriously ill for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bridges have recently had a two hundred fifty foot well drilled at their home. Now they tell us that anyone wishing to dig up the old well and haul it away, can have it. This well was dug many years ago as it is under the kitchen of the house, which is an old old homestead, but when the Bridges moved there and began to modernize the house, they decided to do away with the old well and pump which had been built in the center of the kitchen. Very handy but also very antique.

Baked Potatoes Do Right by Supper
(See Recipes Below)

Supper Social

The simple suppers at which a crowd gathers are pleasant for their warm friendliness, for the cozy talk which they inspire. They are especially easy to give if you plan to have each of your friends bring a dish for the supper — a pot luck, as it were. This will save each woman the time and effort of making a whole meal, and then you will all be together for knitting, sewing or defense work on the calendar for the evening.

An assortment of attractive main dishes are usually received with enthusiasm. Try these for enchanting appetites:

*Russet Half Shells. (Serves 8)

6 medium-sized Idaho bakers
½ cup hot milk
2 tablespoons butter
Salt and pepper to taste
1 large onion, chopped and cooked in butter until tender
12 small pork sausages

Scrub and bake potatoes at 400 to 450 degrees. Remove piece of skin from top of potato, or cut large potatoes lengthwise in two. Scrape out inside being careful not to break the shell. Mash thoroughly, or put through a potato ricer. Add butter, salt, pepper, milk and cooked onion. Beat well. Pile mixture lightly into shells, top with two small pork sausages that have been partially cooked (boiled in a small amount of water). Return to oven and bake at 350 degrees until sausages are cooked through and browned.

If you want to provide everything for your pot-luck supper from individuals except the main dish, here is one that will fill the bill perfectly. Simple to put together and as colorful as it sounds, the salmon loaf does not need much watching if you are busy with other things:

Salmon Loaf. (Serves 25)

4 cans salmon
1 quart fresh bread crumbs
3 cups diced celery
2 ounces butter
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon onion juice
1 teaspoon lemon juice
8 eggs
1 quart scalded milk
1 40-ounce package frosted peas
2 quarts medium white sauce

Combine salmon, bread crumbs, celery, butter, seasonings. Beat up

Lynn Says:

Laundering Tips: With soap one of our prime, do not waste items, you will want to make the most of every scrap of soap you have. Save the small soap scraps from the bathrooms and kitchen, put them in a soap shaker so you will make use of them in washing dishes.

To have clean clothes even in spite of economical soap usage use your washing machine wisely. Use only just so much water in your machine as the water line indicates and do not overload your machine. Six to eight pounds of dry clothes are about right for the average washing machine.

Mix the soap thoroughly with the water before putting in the clothes. About two inches of soap suds are necessary to do the job up right.

Water temperatures play an important part in laundering. Do not use very hot water for white clothes. For colored clothes, water comfortable to your hand is best. For synthetic silks, wools, rayons, water should be lukewarm.

eggs, add scalded milk. Add to salmon mixture. Make one or two salmon loaves. Bake in a greased pan placed in hot water at 325 degrees until loaves are firm. Make a green pea sauce by cooking frosted peas for 5 to 8 minutes in boiling salted water. Combine with white sauce. Pour over loaf when serving and slice the loaf.

Whisk any of these baked bean combinations into the oven and you have a quickie dinner dish if you have just hurried home from your defense training courses:

Pork Chops and Baked Beans
Casserole. (Serves 6)
6 pork chops
1 large can baked beans
1 teaspoon sugar
½ cup tomato catsup

Fry pork chops until nicely browned on both sides. Pour baked beans over chops, add sugar and catsup. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 20 minutes. Nothing equals the charm of home-baked, freshly baked bread that fills the surroundings with a delicious fragrance. That's why I give you this recipe for old-fashioned:

*Raisin Bread. (Makes 2 loaves)

1 package fresh granular yeast
1 cup lukewarm water
½ teaspoon sugar
1 cup scalded milk
2 teaspoons salt
¼ cup brown sugar (solidly packed)
½ cup corn syrup
5½ to 6 cups (or more) flour
6 tablespoons melted shortening
1½ cups seedless raisins

Pour the granular yeast into the cup of lukewarm water, add the half teaspoon sugar, stir and let stand about 5 minutes. Put the scalded milk, salt, sugar and corn syrup into mixing bowl. Let cool. When milk is lukewarm, add the softened yeast and 3 cups of flour. Mix well, then beat until smooth. Next add the melted (not hot) shortening and enough flour to have the dough cling together in a ball. Add the raisins which have been covered for a few minutes with very hot water, then dried in a cloth, and dusted with flour. Knead the dough thoroughly, adding only enough flour to avoid stickiness. Let dough rise in a covered, greased bowl in a moderately warm place (82 to 84 degrees) until doubled. Fold the dough down and let rise about ½ hour, then divide and shape into two loaves. Place in greased bread pans and brush tops with melted shortening. Let rise until doubled. Bake about 50 minutes in a moderately hot oven (375 to 380 degrees). If desired, brush tops with honey just before taking from the oven.

For an in-the-season, centerpiece note, besides its economical aspects, try this: A long, low, shallow bowl in pottery or glass such as you may have used for relishes, if large enough, use a snow-white cauliflower banked with parsley, eggplant, radishes or tomatoes.

If you like candles for the table, place these in little baking cuts or ramekins, at either side of the vegetable bowl.

A simple setting like this calls for gay, unadorned china and soft or bright plaids in tablecloth and napkins.

GASOLINE CRISIS QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q.—When I get into a filling station can I get all the gas I want?

A.—It will depend on how many cars have been ahead of you.

Q.—If I drive into a station and say "Fill her up," what answer will I get?

A.—No answer; just a laugh.

Q.—Will I be able to buy gas at any hour of the day or night?

A.—That depends on your luck.

Q.—My luck when out of gas has never been hot. So what?

A.—So you'd better realize that under the new orders no gas station may be open more than 12 hours a day, and there is no telling which 12 hours a station may choose.

Q.—You mean that if I run short of gas between six at night and six in the morning I may find the nearest pumping stations only operate during the day, and if I run short during the day I may find the nearest stations only run nights?

A.—It's wonderful how quickly you grasp an idea.

Q.—Isn't this a little screwy?

A.—How so?

Q.—I mean isn't it better for all gas stations to keep open certain specific hours as under the previous ban, so that any autoist may plan his travels intelligently?

A.—What makes you think autoists plan their travels intelligently? Q.—May dealers stagger their hours; that is, open from 10 to noon, close from noon to 2 p. m., reopen from 2 to 4, etc.?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What would be the sense of this?

A.—Well, it would add a speculative appeal to the whole thing.

Q.—Would it appeal to the American public?

A.—Look how bingo is doing!

Q.—What is the guiding rule for gas sellers?

A.—The whole idea is to fill simply the minimum requirements of essential users.

Q.—What is an essential user?

A.—An essential user is an autoist whose driving is necessary.

Q.—For instance?

A.—Doctors, army and navy men, nurses, government officials, etc., are people whose use of a car is necessary.

Q.—Then can I get all the gas I need if I take a nurse out for a ride?

A.—Yes, but it will be smarter if you use her car and get her to take you out for a ride.

Q.—Would it be all right for me to have ten gallons now?

A.—Have you stopped to think that ten gallons of gas might be the deciding factor in a vital tank battle at the front?

Q.—Should I make it seven gallons?

A.—Don't you realize that seven gallons of gas might get the valiant men out of a tight spot in India?

Q.—I'll take five.

A.—Do you realize that with war engulfing the whole civilized world every gallon of . . .

Q.—Stop. I get it. Lemme have a half pint!

A.—You're hopeless.

BREVITY IN THE AIR

A naval flier sent this laconic report to his commander: "Sighted sub; sank same." Had he been a "versifier" he might have put it: Sighted Sub; sank same—Sought more; none came—All gone; can't blame—This life too tame.

But real brevity might have required:

Streamlining

The streamlining of airplanes has been developed to a point where, for example, the wind resistance of a modern single-engine pursuit machine, at any speed, is no greater than that of a flat plate 22 inches square.

Applicant's Preparations Somehow Were in Vain

The nervous-looking man was applying for a job.

"I think I shall be able to suit all requirements, sir," he said.

The manager, after looking at his references, shook his head.

"I am afraid not," he replied.

"We're wanting a single man."

The applicant's eyes nearly popped out of his head. "But," he gulped, "Yesterday, you said you wanted a married man!"

"I'm sorry," said the manager; "it must have been a mistake."

"Mistake!" shouted the applicant. "It's all very well to sit there and say it's a mistake."

What am I to do? I went straight out and got married!"

WAR NOW DEMANDS

that your coal bin take part

Huge quantities of war material are being made with all speed and equally huge amounts of coal are needed. Coal must be supplied unflinchingly to factories, railroads and power plants.

The burden on mines and transportation is bound to become increasingly severe—is certain to strain capacity to keep both homes and industry supplied unless we do something now!

You can be helpful and protect yourself by doing one simple thing. Decide to order coal immediately! You'll benefit from the season's low cost... make sure you actually HAVE the same fine quality and preparation you have grown to prefer.

And you serve defense by helping coal move in the steady stream that must be maintained if we shall have enough.
